Activity Report

- In general, fast food has poor nutritional value and is high in calories. The consumption of commercial fast food products in excess has been shown to have detrimental short- and long-term effects on health. As an awareness drive, Department of Physical Sciences, University Institute of Sciences has successfully conducted a one Day Webinar on “Impact of fast food on health ” for faculty of SBBSU on 27th May, 2020.
- Resource person for this workshop were:
 - Dr. Shweta Singh, Assistant Professor (Microbiology), SBBSU
- Dr. Shweta Singh, expert for the webinar is Assistant Professor (Microbiology) in the Department of Life Sciences, Allied Health Sciences, SBBSU. She has more than 6 year teaching and research experience. Her area of research included: Clinical Bacteriology, virology and molecular biology.
- Webinar was inaugurated by Dr Nisha Sharma, Coordinator, Physical Sciences and has provide the significance and applicability of such webinar. She highlighted the various prospective of impact of fast food on health.
- Expert has highlighted various aspects of prevalent use of fast food in society. In the prevalent situation of Covid-19, there is an urgent need to adopt a health life style and adopt health practices especially in term of our diet. In current scenario, there are various fast food products which are processed and easily available at economic prices. Fast food contains a variety of unhealthful ingredients. It contains a lot of processed preservatives and components, as well as a lot of sugar, salt, saturated or trans fats. Moreover, it lacks some essential minerals. Due to the processed carbs and added sugar in fast food, it digests quickly and causes a quick rise in blood sugar. There is a tonne of scientific evidence that suggests eating fast food frequently can be bad for one's health. Obesity, insulin resistance, type 2 diabetes, and a number of cardiovascular diseases are some of these hazards. A diet heavy in salt can often raise blood pressure, putting one at risk for heart attacks, strokes, kidney disease, and cardiac disease. Similarly a diet high in trans fats causes a decrease in high-density lipoprotein (HDL), or "good" cholesterol, and an increase in low-density lipoprotein (LDL), or "bad" cholesterol. This indicates that a person's risk of developing heart disease is higher.

- There were more than 30 students and faculty members of SBBSU as participants in this webinar, all have participated enthusiastically. Faculty from various disciplines of sciences and technology and other institutes of SBBSU have participated in this webinar. All sessions were highly informative.
- Experts have elaborated different components of fast food and especially focused on the effect of each component on health. She has provided the information how different disease especially diabetes, obesity and cancer become prominent due to consumption of fast food. Being specialist of microbiology, she has highlighted the safety aspects associated with packaging and packed product.
- There was question/answer session and thorough discussion among participants.
- This webinar was full of knowledge and provided awareness to all and guided all to minimize the consumption of fast/packed food.
- Conveners of the webinar have paid vote of thanks to all the delegates and participants and paid gratitude to the university authorities for providing their support in organizing the webinar.
- There is no registration fee for the webinar. e-Certificates have been issued to all the participants for the successful participation.
